It is searcely a year and a half since the close of the Freuch-German war. At that time France lay bleeding and sterly helpless at the feet of her Teutonic conquerors -her armies beaten, demoralized, and her best troops and ablest generals prisoners of war-her [Emperor the involuntary guest of the German Kaiser-ber soil overrun, her cities and towns laid in ruins, and Paris itself in the hands of her enemies. In this condition she sued for peace, and obtained it on conditions in respect of pecuniary obligations such as no nation in the world's history ever before had to sub-mit to. When Bismarck's conditions of peace were made known, the impression was almost universal that they were otterly beyond the ability of France to pay, notwithstanding the vastness of her resources and the wealth of her populaes that had crowned the German rmies from the opening to the close of the campaign, his object was so to crush and weaken the power of France as an rears to come, if ever, she should not be in a position again to disturb the peace of Germany or place any obstacle in the way to the accomplishment of the great dation of German power on the banks of the Rhine. But in the face of the most unbeard of national vicissitudes and losses, occasioned by domestic as well as foreign enemies, France has risen like a phoen'x from her ashes, and stands proudly forth to-day as a foremost in Europe, strong in her physical night, abundant in resources, with ample means at her command to discharge her debt to Germany, and so far as her army is concerned better prepared now to measure swords with her ancient enemy than the was before the late war commenced. The total cost of the war is estimated at about eighteen hundred s of dollars, a burden of debt that but few nations on earth beside France could successfully bear, and yet we hear of no difficulty whatever on horrs saanich—Wain's Hotel; ber part in promptly meeting her obligations. A contemporary, the other day, observed that, "if anything could show the vigor and strength of the nation and the wonderful confidence of her people, it is the way they raise the money to pay the German indemnity." M. Goulard, the French Minister of Finance, asked the Assembly the other day to permit him to raise a loan of £140,000,000. Obtaining lease, he appealed to the French people for a loan at 5 per cen', payable to the Government in instalits, extending over a period of three The loan was offered," we are "not to bankers and capitalists pecially, but to the people. The bonds icates were put on the market at 22 and the whole sum was subscribed in Have received instructions from the very short time. Paris took £20,000,city, on contract, in anticipation of the lean, amounted to half the loan. Referring to this loan, a California contemporary says: "France, after all, is a country of wonderful resources. The Government proposes to the people a larger loan than was ever proposed by any country before, amounting to $700,000,000. The people, at the close of a wasting war, ap and take the whole of it on terms favorable to the country. France is not ruined when she can borrow of her own people seven hundred million dollars.

France had for forty years previous to Sixty-One quarter and half the late war with Germany been growing rich by a careful development of all her resources. To a considerable extent she has held a monopoly of the wine interests.

Whatever the facts may be in this country touching the wine interests, there is hardly room to doubt that France has been greatly enriched by her vineyards, and that these are now one of the chief cources of her wealth. Then she carly adopted the policy of entire independence of the West India Islands for supplies of France. Wine, silk and sugar are three one which has helped France over great financial crisis. The country increases slowly in population. But the balance of trade is always in her favor, the country producing more than it con-sumes. In 1815 France could not pay her debts In 1872 France borrows of her own people $700,000,000, and could have borrowed much more had the money been needed. Taxes will be higher in that country, but the money goes back to the people in the shape of interest on the loan."
